Dear family and friends,

Welcome to the Penn State Smeal College of Business spring 2016 commencement ceremony. Today, we gather to celebrate the accomplishments of the class of 2016. It is particularly exciting for me to recognize the success of this class, filled with so many students who began their Penn State journeys in 2012; the same year I became dean at Smeal. I imagine many feel as I do now: Where did the time go?

For this class, today marks the close of undergraduate education at Penn State and Smeal. More than that, it symbolizes a door opening to a promising future. When these students turn their tassels, they will officially become college graduates.

Our commencement speaker today, Salomon "Sal" Sredni, is a Smeal alumnus and a valued member of our Board of Visitors. He will have the unique opportunity to not only deliver the commencement address, but also to watch his twin daughters graduate in the same ceremony. I am looking forward to what will certainly be a heartfelt address.

We encourage our graduates to go forward with honor and integrity while upholding our Penn State Values in their future endeavors.

On behalf of the university and the Smeal College of Business, thank you for the role each one of you has played in the lives of these new Penn State alumni.

Congratulations to the class of 2016!

Best regards,

Charles H. Whiteman
John and Becky Surma Dean

Commencement Information

To Our Guests

Commencement, the solemn but joyful climax and recognition of the graduates' years of study, is an important occasion to the University, its faculty, staff, and students. All guests and participants are requested to avoid unnecessary conversation or moving about during the exercises.

Only authorized press and University photographers are permitted on the floor to take pictures once the exercises are in progress.

When the processional party enters at the beginning of the ceremony, the audience rises. They remain standing until all members of the platform party have taken their places on the platform and during the singing of the National Anthem.

Following the singing of the Alma Mater, there is a recessional. The audience is requested to remain seated during this period.

We welcome you to the commencement exercises for baccalaureate degree candidates.

Academic Procession

The Mace, which symbolizes the President's authority, is carried at the head of the academic procession by a University Marshal. It was carved from a newel post saved from the original Old Main (which was rebuilt in 1929).

Academic Dress

Academic dress had its beginning in the Middle Ages. When the English universities were taking form in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, the scholars were also clerics and adopted robes similar to those of their monastic orders. Caps were a necessity in the drafty buildings, and capes with hoods attached were needed for warmth. The hood was selected by these early scholars as the article to be made distinctive for the various degrees by its color, trimming, and binding. As the universities gradually passed from the control of these ecclesiastics, costumes took on brighter hues.

The use of academic costume in the United States has been continuous since the colonial times. A uniform system was not widespread, however, until about 1895 when the well-defined code of the Intercollegiate Commission was adopted by nearly all institutions of higher learning.

Gowns worn by those in the procession vary according to the degree held. Although the gown is more frequently black for academic degrees, certain universities have authorized the use of colored gowns. The academic gown has short or regular sleeves for the bachelor's degree, pointed sleeves for the master's degree, and round full sleeves for the doctor's degree. There are no trimmings on the bachelor's or master's gowns, but the doctor's gown is faced in the front with black velvet and has three bars of the same material across the sleeves. In some cases, the color of this velvet relates to the field in which the degree is granted.

Hoods are not usually worn by recipients of the bachelor's degree. The hood, the most distinctive feature of the American code, varies in length according to the type of degree held and is lined with the official colors of the institution conferring the degree. The velvet border or edging of the hood indicates the character of the degree it represents: blue – philosophy; light blue – education; brown – fine arts; blue violet – architecture; copper – economics; drab – business administration; golden yellow – science; green – medicine; sage green – physical education; orange – engineering; pink – music; russet – forestry; white – arts, letters, and humanities.

The cap is usually square and is the same for all degrees. The standard tassel is black, but the doctor's cap may have a gold tassel. The standard cap is the mortarboard, usually the color of the gown. Undergraduates wear the tassel on the right side of the cap until the moment the degree is conferred, and then it is transferred to the left side.

About Penn State

As Pennsylvania's only land-grant university, Penn State has a broad mission of teaching, research, and public service. But that mission was not so grandly conceived in 1855, when the Commonwealth chartered it as one of the nation's first colleges of agricultural science, with a goal to apply scientific principles to farming.

Centre County became the site of the new college in response to a gift of 200 acres from gentleman farmer and ironmaster James Irvin of Bellefonte. Founding President Evan Pugh drew on the scientific education he had received in Europe to plan a curriculum that combined theoretical studies with practical applications. Penn State assumed a broader mission in 1863, when it became the Commonwealth's only land-grant institution, part of a system of universities and colleges created by Congress to foster education not only in agriculture, but also in engineering and other academic disciplines that had practical value to a nation that was rapidly industrializing.

In the 1880s, President George W. Atherton expanded the curriculum to match the Land-Grant Act's broad mandate. From that time onward, curriculums in engineering, the sciences, the liberal arts, and more began to flourish. In the early 1900s, Penn State introduced cooperative extension and additional outreach programming, extending the reach of its academic mission.

In the 1930s, Penn State established a series of undergraduate branch campuses, primarily to meet the needs of students who were location-bound during the Great Depression. Those campuses were predecessors of today's system of 24 Penn State campuses located throughout the Commonwealth. A college of medicine and teaching hospital were established in 1967 with a $50 million gift from the charitable trusts of renowned chocolate magnate Milton S. Hershey. In 1997, Penn State and the Dickinson School of Law joined ranks. Penn State's online World Campus graduated its first students in 2000 and now enrolls more than 10,000.

Today, Penn State awards more associate, baccalaureate, and graduate degrees than any other institution in the Commonwealth. Its outreach and research programs rank among the nation's top ten. Graduates of the University join a family of some 631,000 alumni. The Penn State Alumni Association—the largest dues-paying organization of its kind—helps Penn Staters stay connected with each other and the University through a powerful network of 280 chapters and other affiliated groups in all 50 states and more than 40 foreign countries.

Smeal College of Business History

Milton S. Eisenhower assumed the presidency of Penn State in 1950 with a simple mandate: build an institution that merits national recognition. The 1953 formation of an autonomous school of business, the offspring of the Commerce and Finance Department in Liberal Arts, was a step in that direction.

More than fifty years after its founding, Eisenhower's vision for the future has become reality in the Smeal College of Business. Over six decades, the college has advanced steadily, building on its undergraduate, graduate and executive education programs, and its major research centers. Today, the college offers highly ranked programs to more than 6,000 students at all levels.

A story that began in 1953, with Ossian R. "Bob" MacKenzie as founding dean, has continued through the deanships of Eugene J. Kelley, J.D. Hammond, Judy Olian, James Thomas, and Charles H. Whiteman. As the business environment has evolved, each leader has overseen the launch and renewal of key initiatives and programs that have addressed the changing business landscape: preparing graduates for what's ahead, responding to the needs of business partners, and advancing present-day business practices.

Developments, such as the introduction of the MBA program in 1959 and the emergence of its respected communications program in the 1970s, have set the tone for progressive innovation within the college. From the development of Penn State Executive Programs—which helped solidify the college's partnerships with the business community during the early years—to the initial creation of several centers and institutes under the Division of Research, to the launch of the Smeal Executive MBA program in Philadelphia, Smeal has earned a place among the national and international leaders of business education.

Smeal's connection to its own alumni base has also grown and flourished during its history. One of the most enduring alumni connections was forged in 1990 with the naming of the college for Mary Jean and Frank P. Smeal '42/'42, two of Penn State's most generous benefactors. Their contributions created five endowed chairs within the college as well as a separate endowment for program excellence. Today, Smeal counts more than 75,000 alumni around the globe.

Situated at the eastern gateway to the University Park campus, the Business Building features modern architecture and innovative learning technology, promoting an open and collaborative learning environment for the entire Smeal community.
